

SCALER

You belong here.

Hey Meera! Really glad we got to talk today -- it takes guts to even ask the questions you asked, especially with a government offer already on the table. Your clarity about wanting a product company career, not just any job, stuck with me.

Plain answers for you

You asked if Scaler can guarantee a job -- here is the honest answer

No program can legally or honestly guarantee you a job, and anyone who says otherwise is selling you something. What I can tell you is that Scaler has 900+ hiring partners and an alumni network of 100,000+ people -- that is a real, active ecosystem, not a brochure number. The government offer gives you security; Scaler gives you a structured shot at the product company career you actually want. Those are two genuinely different bets, and only you can decide which risk feels right -- but you are not choosing between safe and nothing, you are choosing between two real paths.

Rs.3.5L when your family earns less than that -- how does this actually work?

You said it yourself: "I genuinely don't know how people afford this" -- and that is the most honest question anyone can ask. Scaler does have EMI options that break the fee into monthly payments, so you are not paying Rs.3.5L upfront. The exact plans, whether there are scholarships, and what is available for your specific cohort are things admissions will walk you through on your next call -- I do not want to quote you numbers I cannot verify. What I will say is: the financing conversation is worth having before you decide, not after.

Nervous about the entrance test -- what if you don't clear it?

You asked "does that mean I'm not right for this?" -- and the answer is no, it does not mean that at all. The test is a starting point, not a verdict on you. Exact retake rules and prep support are something admissions will confirm for your batch, so I would rather you hear the real policy from them than a guess from me. What I do know is that the test exists to make sure you get placed in the right environment -- it is designed to set you up, not screen you out. Take it as a first step, not a final exam.

Fees & EMI (ask admissions for yours)

Fees are significant. Plan EMI and options with admissions so you see real numbers.

Example reference only: roughly Rs. 3.5L program fee cited in admissions materials; tenure and EMI depend on partner and cohort.

Others who started similarly

Stories are illustrative only. Admissions can walk through cohort fit with you honestly.

We map financing and pace with families when that is the blocker.

The entrance check is commitment and aptitude based. Ask admissions for preparation notes for your cohort.

Entrance test - what we tell people

It is needed for admissions. Ask your BDA what format and prep look like today. Failed once does not mean you are unwelcome forever; verify rules on your next call.

Take the entrance test -- it is the one concrete thing that moves you from 'thinking about it' to actually knowing what is possible for you.
